

The role of Australian cross-border education in creating new orientations for international students

Dr David Pyvis

Faculty of Media, Society & Culture, Curtin University of Technology, GPO Box U 1987, Perth, Western Australia, 6845

Tel: (618) 9266 4632 Email: D.Pyvis@curtin.edu.au

This paper draws on data from a qualitative case study conducted at an Australian university's 'offshore' campus in Malaysia to highlight the originality of the combinations of international students that are being engaged by new, various and evolving modes of programme delivery. The argument developed is that cross-border education is enabling new orientations for international students into Australian higher education.