

The National Code: Nuts and bolts of Australian international education

Cheryl Cook

This workshop reviews the challenges of engaging with a revised legislative environment and looks at these encounters from three angles – practical application, recognition of content and function and, issues discussions. The aim is to engage industry professionals, both physically and mentally, in consolidating their awareness and examining the National Code 2007 in relation to their work requirements and encourage them to consider informed options.

Through teamwork, problem solving, and strategy discussions, participants will appreciate the dissemination of important information as an active learning experience. This experience will incorporate both DEST and ISANA expertise.
