

Developing intercultural competence: A key competence for the 21st Century

Professor Darla Deardorff, Duke University

Intercultural competence is emerging as a key competence to address in the 21st century. What exactly is intercultural competence? How can we develop - and assess- intercultural competence in our students? How can we reflect on our own intercultural competence? This interactive talk provides an overview of intercultural competence in higher education and explores myths, strategies and opportunities, as well as a framework, for developing intercultural competence in our students.