

Collaborations to Enhance International Student Employability: The Victorian Case Study

Diana Crvenkovic, Manager, Student Initiatives, Department of Economic Development, Jobs, Transport and Resources (DEDJTR)

The Victorian Government has taken a leading role in enhancing the employability of international student through its recent Study Melbourne Internships Program. Employability is a key area in the enhancement of student experience for education providers and government, and a primary reason students choose to invest heavily in their education abroad. It is however also an area that international students have identified as needing improvement.

This presentation will take you through the successes of the Study Melbourne Internship Program, the lessons learnt, and how the Victorian Government moving forward, and in collaboration with education providers and industry, will continue to invest in employability programs for international students, ensuring that Victoria remains an internationally competitive student destination.
